HOW TO REPLY TO THIS NOTICE:

If the SMALL ENTITY is shown as YES, verify your current SMALL ENTITY status:

A. If the status is the same, pay the TOTAL FEE(S) DUE shown above.

B. If the status above is to be removed, check box 5b on Part B - Fee(s) Transmittal and pay the PUBLICATION FEE (if required) and twice the amount of the ISSUE FEE shown above, or

DETAILED ACTION

Reasons for Allowance

1. Claims 1-3, 7-12, and 16-18 are allowed.

2. The following is the Examiner's statement of reasons for allowance:

Claims 1-3, 7-12, and 16-18 are allowable over the prior art of record because none of the prior art of record teaches or fairly suggests a system and method for optimized routing of printing wherein a print job is commenced to a print port associated with a client machine and print job data is queued. A prompt is issued to an associated user for print optimization authority and the print job data is communication to the print port so as to generate a printout therefrom. Status data is received from each of the plurality of associated printer devices, which status data includes data representative of a resource commitment level of each associated printer device relative to prior print job requests associated therewith. A print optimization instruction is received from the associated user in response to an issued prompt so as to commence selection of an alternative associated print device for printing as well as delay criteria data corresponding to an acceptable delay period associated with commencement of the print job. The user preauthorizes redirection of the print job to an alternative device in the event specified conditions are met. Elapsed time is determined relative to commencement of the print job relative to each of the plurality of printer devices. The status data is tested data against selected test criteria, elapsed time, and received delay criteria data to determine whether at least one alternative associated printer device is desired for printing. The user is then prompted with information as to the available, alternative printers, along with information as to when a job can be expected to commence from such alternative devices. The user is able to select an alternative printer, based on the delay period and convenience of the printing device. The print job data is selectively redirected, in accordance with the preauthorization and user selection data, from a primary designated associated printer device by assigning the print port to a device port of a secondary associated printer device of the plurality thereof in accordance with a print optimization instruction and an output of the testing, wherein the output of the testing is indicative that the primary designated associated printer device exceeds the user-specified delay criteria.

3. The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure:

- a. Owa et al. (US 6,348,971) discloses a printer selection device which selects an optimum printer for printing a document based on user information indicating such conditions as print commands and specifications, and based on printer information concerning print environments of the printers and causes the optimum printer to print the document. An optimum printer can be selected for each document, or each page of a document.

- b. Idehara (US 2001/0052995) discloses a network system to which a plurality of computers and a plurality of input-output apparatuses are connected, a layout diagram showing locations of the input-output apparatuses is displayed on a display means and icons each representing one of the input-output apparatuses are displayed over the layout diagram at locations corresponding to the locations at which the apparatuses are actually installed. The user clicks one of the icons representing a desired one of the input-output apparatuses by using a device such as a mouse in order to specify the desired apparatus. As a result, a desired input-output apparatus can be selected correctly.
- c. Sesek (US 7,151,611) discloses a data processing system, wherein print jobs are printed on a selected printer utilizing the printer properties in effect for that printer at the time that the print job was spooled for printing. Typically, the printer prints with default printer properties. However, a user can temporarily override these defaults values by specifying temporary printer properties from within an application. A user-specifiable printer properties retention timer value allows the user to control how long temporary printer properties are to be in effect before being set back to their default value.
- d. Simpson et al. (US 7,145,678) discloses In a web-based imaging environment, a user accesses a destination service (e.g., representing a printer), which retrieves user's imaging data production options for a processing job. The user selects desired production options, after which the destination service estimates the time duration required to process the user's job based on the selected options. If the estimated time required is greater than a predetermined threshold, the option of processing is disabled and a message is normally displayed to the user. If not, the option to process is enabled. In variations, the user's ability to process is reevaluated as the user selects differing options. In other variations, an administrator specifies the threshold, or specifies multiple user-specific thresholds, and/or thresholds specific to time of day and/or day of week and/or month. In another variation, if the user cannot process to this production device, a link to an alternative device is provided.

4. Any comments considered necessary by applicant must be submitted no later than the payment of the issue fee and, to avoid processing delays, should preferably accompany the issue fee. Such submissions should be clearly labeled "Comments on Statement of Reasons for Allowance."

Any inquiry concerning this communication or earlier communications from the examiner should be directed to Neil R. McLean whose telephone number is (571)270-1679. The examiner can normally be reached on Monday through Friday 7:30AM-4:00PM EST.
